Disabled Veteran's Tax Exemption

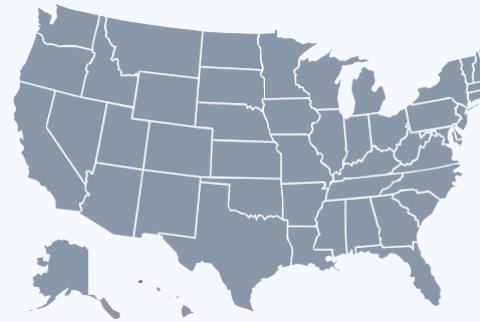

Virginia Law

2009 - 2010 - General Assembly approved constitutional amendments requiring real estate tax exemptions for veterans who occupy a property as a place of residence and are assigned a 100% service-connected, permanent, and total disability rating from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. 2009 \(HJ 648/SJ 275\) and 2010 \(HJ 33/SJ 13\)

2010 - Virginians approved the proposed constitutional amendment as a ballot question.

2011 - The amendment was codified into law during the General Assembly session and became effective January 1, 2011. \(HB 1645/SB 987\)

2015 – Amendment adds surviving spouses of service members killed in action.

Virginia Experience

Disabled Veteran Tax Exemption

In 2011, SB1358's Fiscal Impact Statement (FIS) reported:

- The program would have NO IMPACT on state revenues and an “unknown” revenue loss to localities
- The FIS estimated that 7,710 veterans in Virginia would be considered 100% disabled

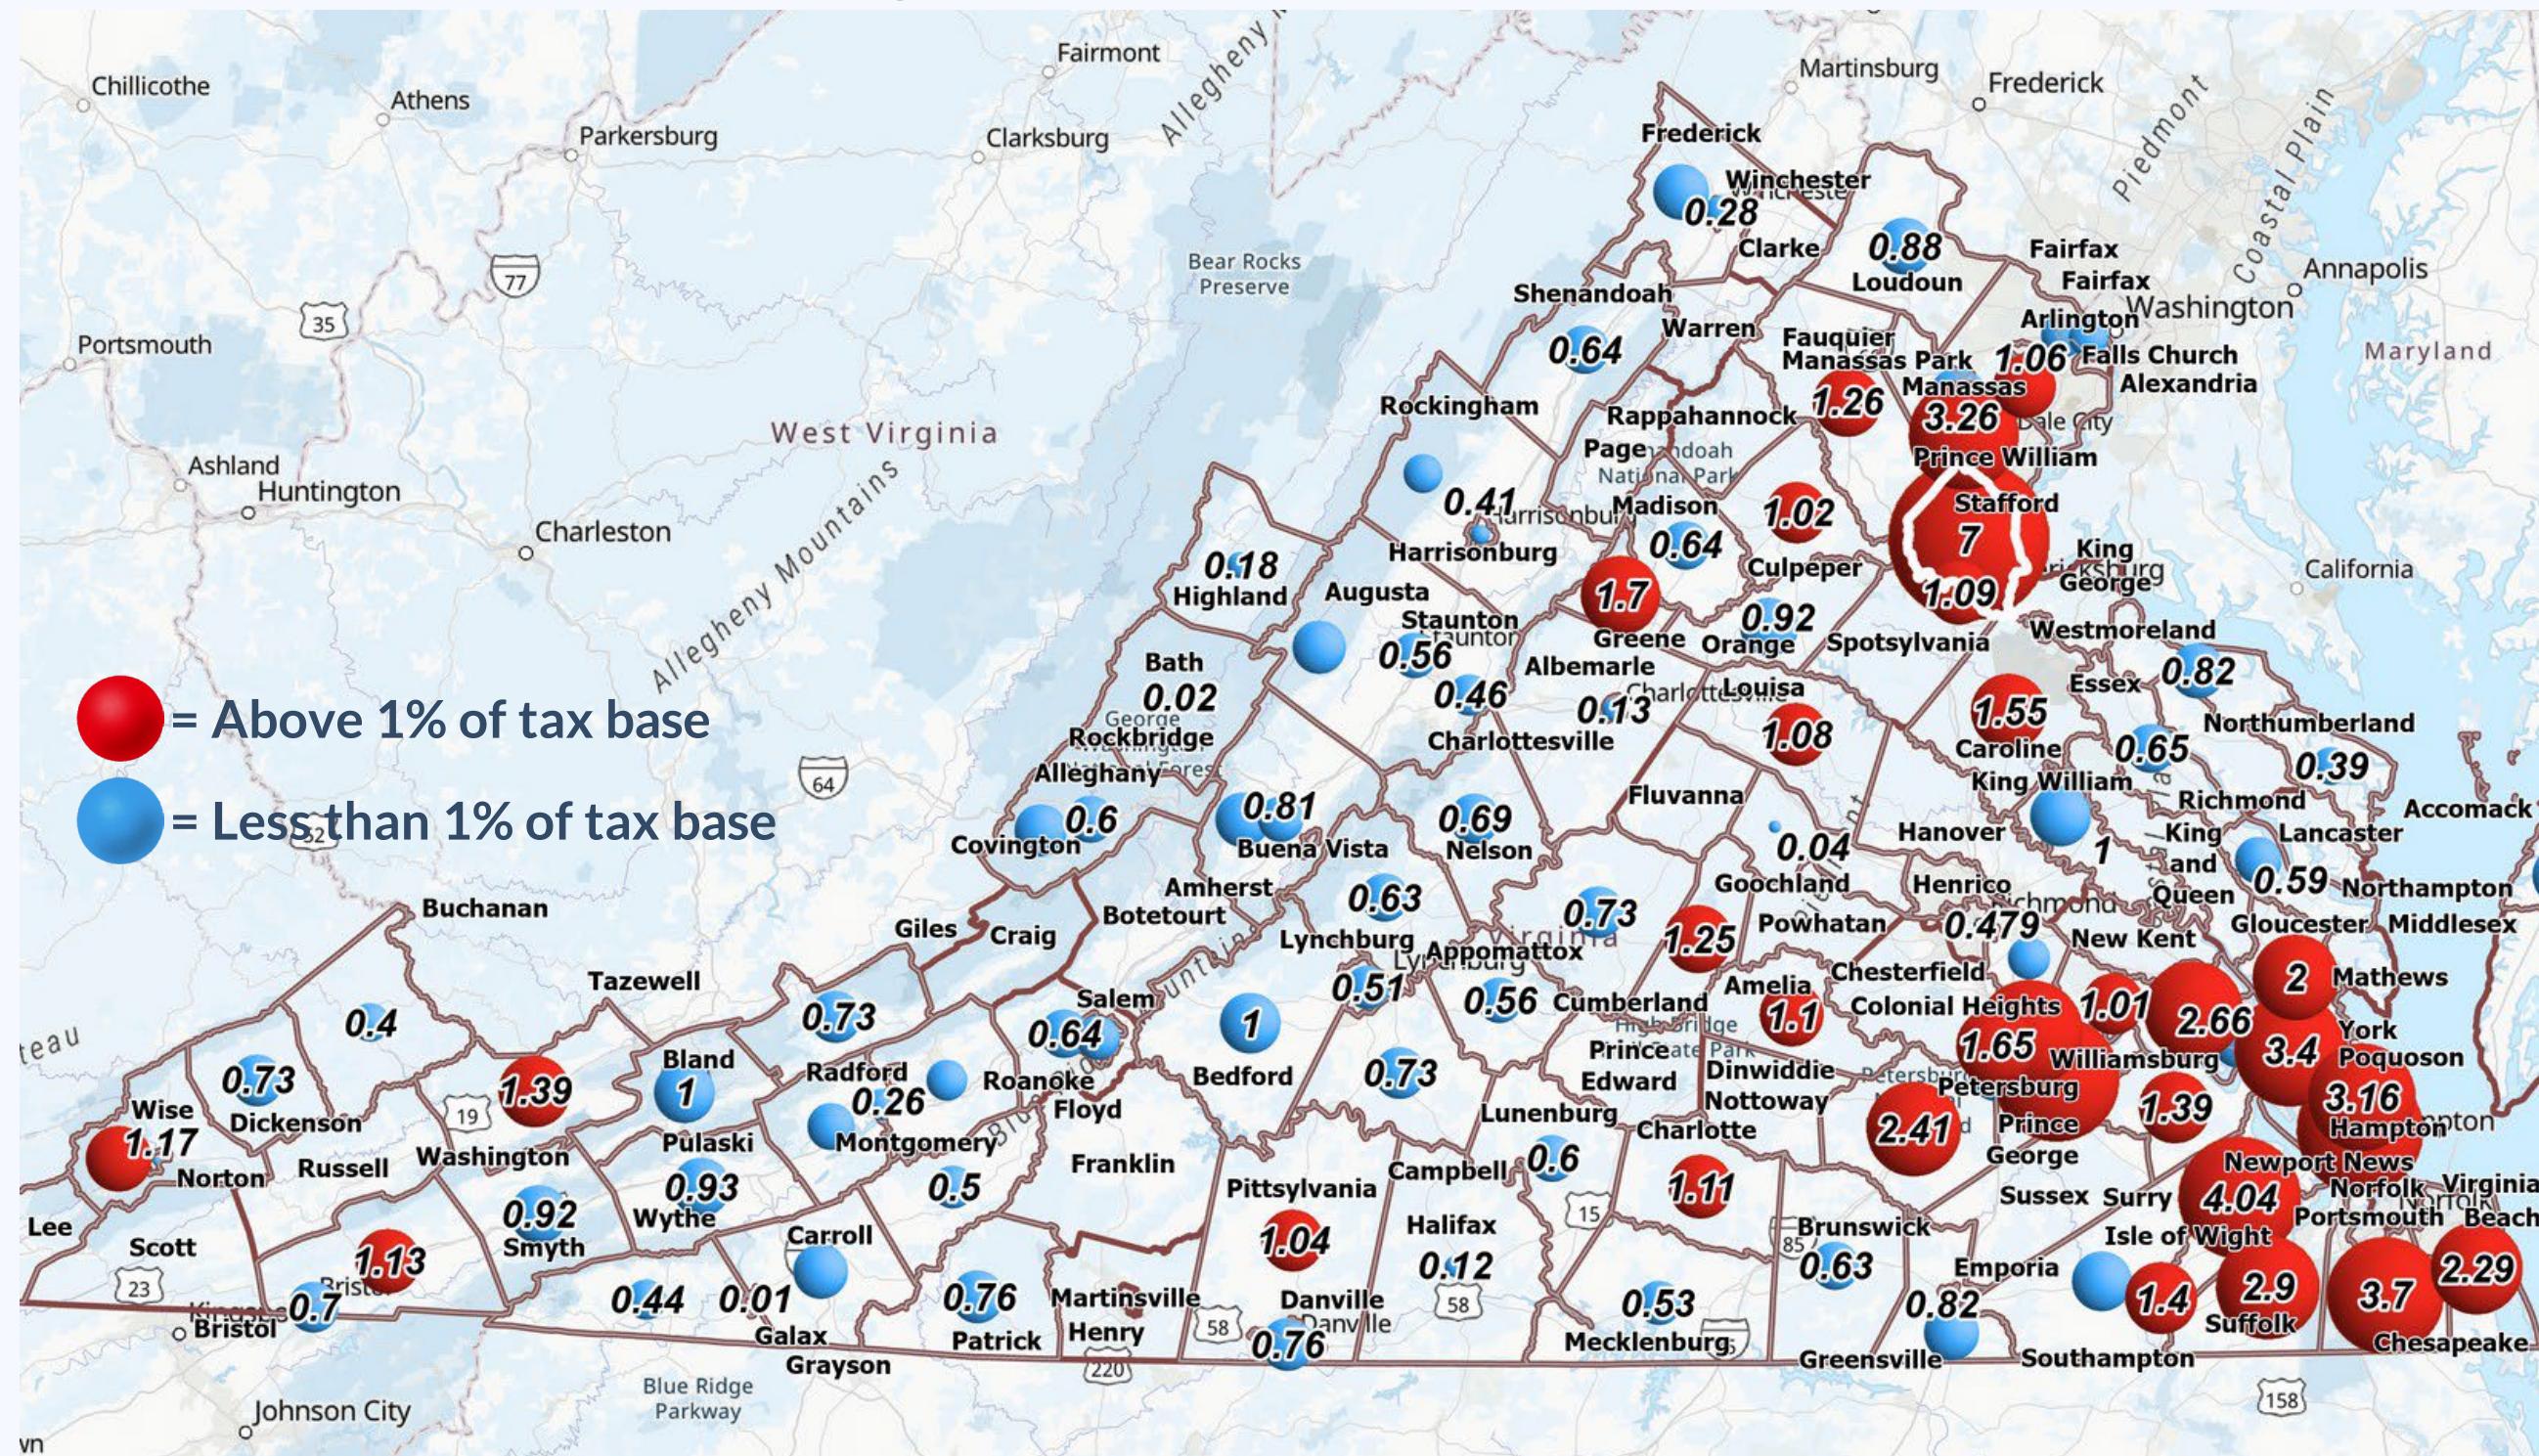

In 2023:

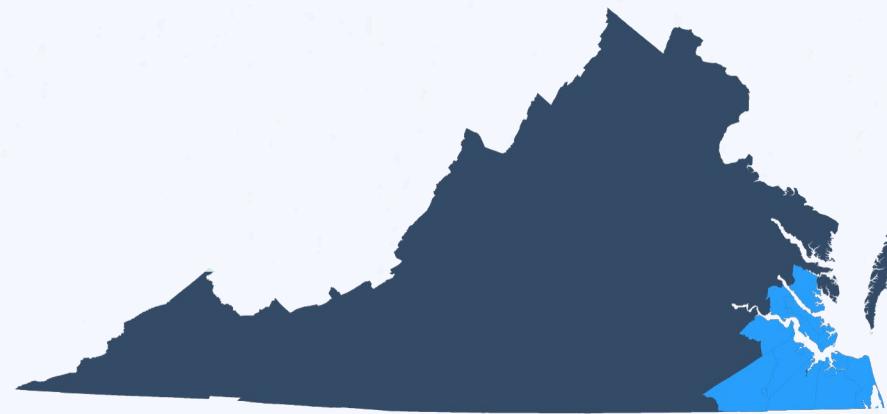

- 39,523 households claimed the exemption (with numbers rapidly increasing in 2024 & 2025)
- 38 Cities & Counties in Virginia provided tax relief totaling more than 1% of their local tax base
- 4 Cities & Counties provided tax relief exceeding 4% of their tax base

How Does Virginia Compare?

All 50 states offer some property tax relief, but the mechanisms vary (full, partial, tiered, credits, caps, and refunds)

Approximately  33% reimburse local governments for most or all of the lost revenue

Approximately  20% of states share mixed responsibility of the cost of the exemptions

Virginia is one of 9 states with a mandated 100% exemption where localities shoulder the entire cost of the exemptions (AL, AR, CA, FL, GA, MS, SC, TX)

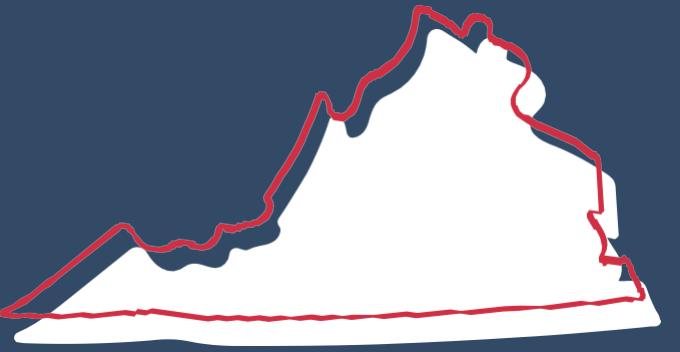

How Does Virginia Compare?

Numerous states have exemptions that are subject to financial need, income caps, wealth/asset limits, and property value caps. Here are a few examples:

- Pennsylvania requires a financial eligibility test
- Kansas uses a refund-style exemption subject to income limits
- Montana's exemption applies only to those who have an income below state-set thresholds
- Nebraska's exemptions are subject to income and home value limits
- Washington's exemptions are subject to income thresholds
- New Hampshire's exemptions are subject to income limits
- Minnesota's exemptions have home value thresholds

Discussion at the General Assembly

In November of 2021, a report on Mandatory Property Tax Exemptions from Virginia's Commission on Local Government (CLG) provided potential policy solutions:

- Full or 50% reimbursement to localities
- Partial reimbursement to high fiscal stress localities
- Partial reimbursement based on veteran relief as a % of real estate taxes

CONCLUSION OF THE CLG:

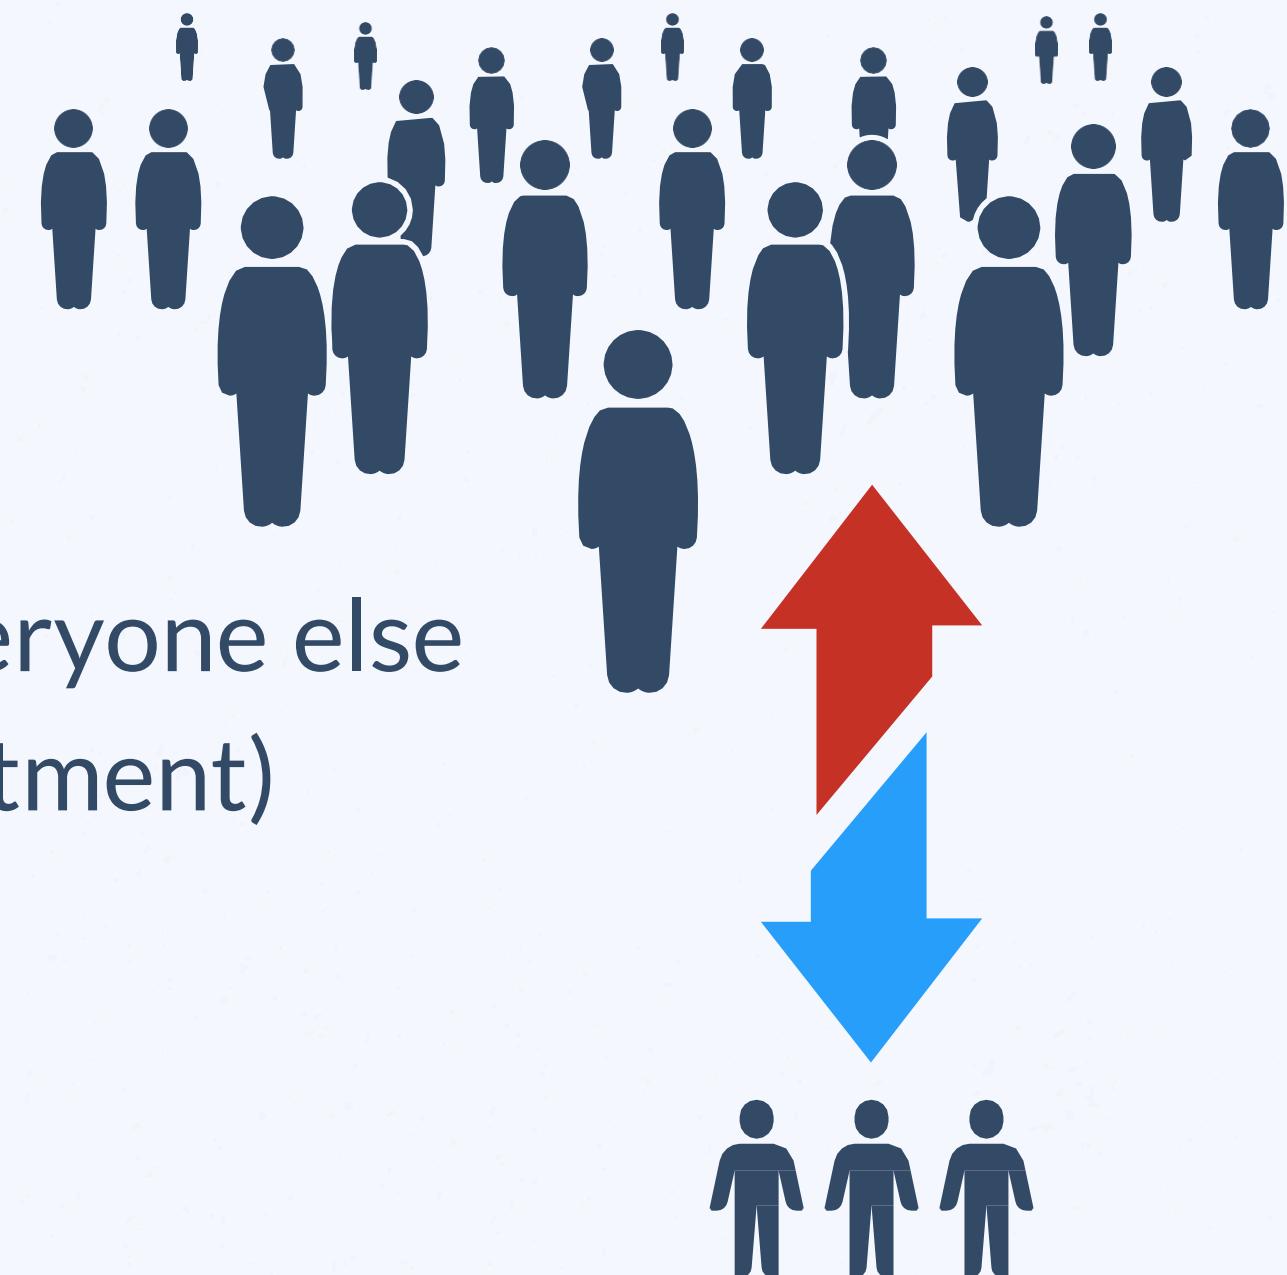

“We would submit that these widely supported mandatory property tax exemptions should be paid for in a spirit of shared fiscal cooperation between state and local governments with a special focus on decreasing the fiscal impact for localities that shoulder the largest costs”

Legislation brought during the 2020, 2022, and 2023 sessions seeking to create a subsidy where the Commonwealth would reimburse localities for disabled veterans exemptions exceeding 1% of the tax base were unsuccessful (SB143 -2020, SB360 – 2022, SB1032 - 2023)

Additional Concerns For Our Residents

Disabled Veterans Tax Exemption

- Equity (wealthy receive the most benefit)
- No benefit to unhoused Veterans
- Tax exemptions for a few = tax increase for everyone else
- Unintended consequences (perception & resentment)

Other Revenue Concerns:

- Telecommunication tax
- Cigarette tax/vaping tax
